

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image pickup apparatus includes a first connector arranged on a wiring board, a second connector including an optical lens and being engageable with the first connector, and a photoelectric conversion module on which light is incident from the optical lens, the photoelectric conversion module being fixedly held when the photoelectric conversion module is clamped by the first and second connectors in a state where the first and second connectors are in engagement and coupled relatively to each other.